

to Okinawa to dive in the Kerama sea on 5/13-16

supported by diving shop COCO-OCEAN

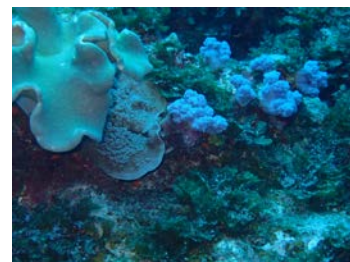

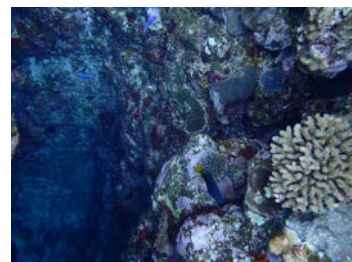

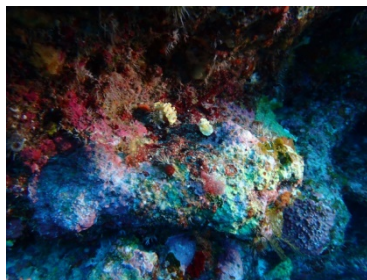

When I visit Okinawa and drove to the Motobu area where Jamming Diving shop operates, I can see Ikeijima island which appears huge on the horizon through the car window. I thought I would go this Island in the near future. This time I made it.

5/13

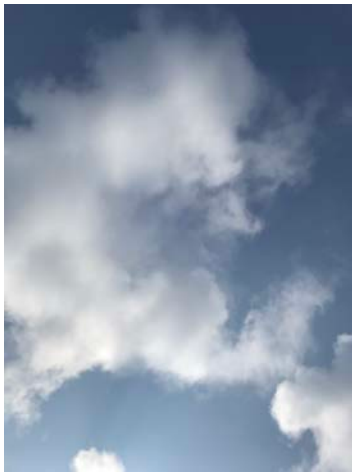

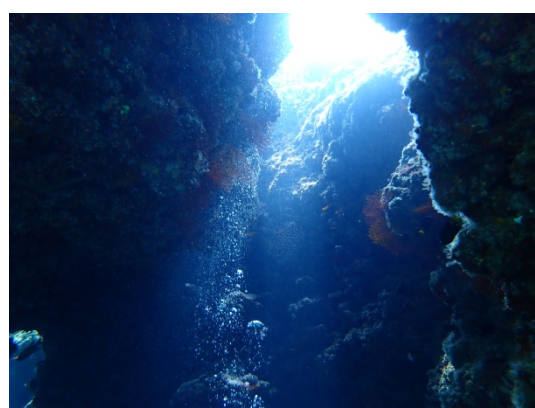

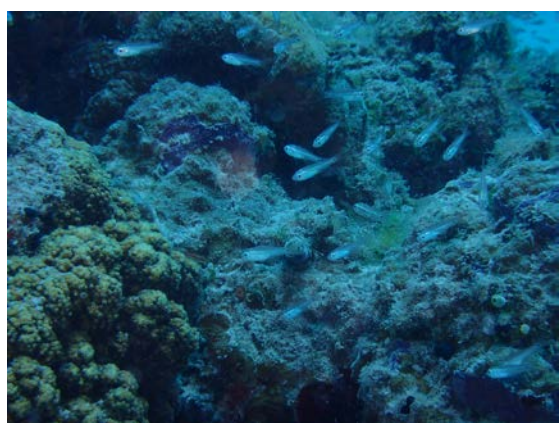

And next two days, I dived.

5/14

5/15

What makes me go diving ?

I've just dived 72 times till now..

Everything was curious at the beginning, about how to dive, how the diving instructors are living their life, how many creatures are there in the sea world. The most wonderful, exciting thing during diving is I can see my unknown world under the sea. I can overlook the diversity of marine creatures like as Peter Pan can overlook livings on the land from the sky. It's fantastic.

When I entered the cave where I couldn't see anything without a flashlight, there were many red fish called blotcheye soldierfish floating still at the same point. The view was amazing for me because I could find the colony of familiar style- red fish living in secret in a cave. Unconsciously I said "Why don't you bathe in sunlight ? It's more comfortable., isn't it?"

Maybe this species of fish can distinguish each other with their keen eye-sight even in a dark cave. The dark cave might not actually dark for them. It's me that felt the cave dark. At that moment I felt and thought there were specific worlds outside the field of my vision. I perceived that in real. It's fantastic.